Dear IAB Community,

If you are wanting a quick overview of the major themes for the industry and IAB Australia focus for 2024 our first podcast for the year covers all this and more with members of the IAB team. A nice audio cheat sheet to keep you up to date.

Many of you would have seen IAB Tech Lab's Privacy Sandbox Taskforce release of draft commentary and analysis on the challenges associated with the industry's adoption of Google's Privacy Sandbox proposals. This analysis includes 45 specific use-cases, grouped into five pillars with both a technical assessment and potential business impact analysis for each use case. We have pulled together an overview, ways to feedback and guidance for the local market.

On behalf of members and the digital advertising industry, IAB Australia has contributed to the Treasury's Scams – Mandatory Industry Codes consultation process. Minimising scams through paid-for advertising is a key concern for the industry and our submission (available for IAB members) outlines our position on the current proposed framework as well as details on how various components of the digital ad ecosystem operate providing context for Government.

Our Affiliate and Partnerships Working Group has just released the fifth chapter of their Knowledge Series this time focusing on proving and measuring incrementality in affiliate marketing. This builds on previous chapters covering topics such as budgeting, managing stakeholders and being part of the media mix.

This week we hear from one of our newer members, Vudoo, a tech company that helps turn content into commerce. Their head of global strategic partnerships shares some information on Vudoo including their mission and productions.

Don't forget to register for both upcoming IAB events (Audio Summits and Powering DOOH) as well as check out the discount codes for other industry events including Cannes in Cairns, the Future of TV and Programmatic Summit).

More resources and a swathe of industry job openings below.

'Til next week
